Carried off by Gypsies

TERRIFYING EXPERIENCE OF 16 YEAR OLD MARIE THOMPSON WHO WAS SOLD TO A GYPSY BAND AND MADE TO BEG AND TELL FORTUNES UNDER PENALTY OF DEATH.

KING ALECK ADAMS THE GYPSY KING.

"I AM not a gypsy," said sixteen-year-old Marie Thompson. "I am not the wife of the Gypsy King's brother. I was stolen and sold to King Adams for $300.

"The tribe forced me to dance and tell fortunes, travelling from town to town. I collected as much as $15 in a day, but they always took every cent from me.

"I tried to escape, but could not, for they watched me every minute. Besides, they said they would kill me if I did not obey."

Clad in bright-colored silks and gaudy spangles, the girl stood before a judge in the Clayton Court House, near St. Louis, Mo., the central figure in a scene such as one might expect to occur in some barbarous country. Near her stood her father and mother and the Gypsy King, who had bought her, according to the custom of his tribe, as civilized people buy a horse or a cow.

"She is our daughter," said Antonio Thompson. "My wife and I have travelled 4,000 miles, following gypsy bands, and spent all our money to find and reclaim her."

"We bought the girl, and she is ours," declared King Adams doggedly, determined to keep so pretty and profitable a member of his tribe.

It was only after a sharp battle between a deputy sheriff at the head of thirty citizens and a camp of fifty gypsies that the girl and her case had been brought before a civilized tribunal.

For a whole year the girl's father and mother had followed clues to their missing daughter, visiting every gypsy camp between Los Angeles, Cal., their home, and St. Louis. One evening toward the middle of December they reached the outskirts of St. Louis, making their way to King Adams's Winter quarters on a hillside near Washington University.

As they approached the entrance to the tent occupied by the wandering monarch a black-eyed girl clad in bright-colored robes, a gaudy turban on her head, large rings in her ears and spangles in her ringlets, ran out of the tent and threw herself on Mrs. Thompson's breast, crying:

"Mother! Mother!"

In spite of her disguise, the girl was recognized. There was a tearful and happy reunion of a minute or two, when King Adams stalked from his tent and took Marie roughly by the arm.

"Stop!" said Mr. Thompson. "She is our daughter. We have come to take her home!"

The King of the gypsies drew himself up, frowning angrily, and said:

"Begone! She is not your daughter. By our laws she is a stranger to you—you shall not have her. She is the wife of Peter Adams, my brother and loyal subject. He is her father and mother and husband."

Weeping, Marie threw herself into her father's arms, saying:

"Save me, papa! Take me home!"

"See here, you scoundrel!" said the stalwart Californian, "you'd better drop that tone. It will go hard with the man who tries to separate me from my daughter."

King Adams's answer was a shrill whistle, and with incredible swiftness he was surrounded by at least seventy stout vagabonds of his tribe, all armed and awaiting his orders. The order came:

"Take my brother's wife to her tent!"

Instantly Marie was torn from her father's arms and borne, struggling and screaming, into one of the tents. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were then driven out of the camp.

On the following day they went to the Clayton Court House and procured a

THE SHADOW OF MRS. BRADLEY'S UNPUNISHED CRIME

The Lesson of the Bradley Case.

By Dorothy Dix.

THIS story of Mrs. Bradley as unfolded at the recent murder trial in Washington is of deeper significance to her sex than that of the majority of women who step aside from the straight and narrow path.

Never was such an object-lesson offered to women. Never was such a warning sounded. Never were the pink chiffons of romance so ruthlessly stripped from about her knees, right and the figure of unfaithful love, smoking it day, begging him to what it is—a festering corpse that defies divorce as wife and and poisons unto death all those who touch it.

For Mrs. Bradley said to herself that she was deserted, that she was unhappy and miserable at home, that she had found her affinity, and that she had a right to unknowingly to be take her own happiness as she could. She has, and he would not was very sure that she despised us and give his name and conventions and amenities of society, and position to a woman that she was ready to say, "All for love, and the world well lost."

So she threw her sacred cup of good repute over the windmill. She took another woman's husband from her. She sacrificed the respect of all who knew her for the sake of the one man who was to be all in all to her, and with whom she dreamed of living in a Paradise of Love.

Then what happened? Precisely what always happens, for human nature was no more made over for Mrs. Bradley than it would be for you or me.

Once the pursuit was over, and she was his, the man tired of her. Little children were born to her, and he refused to give them a name.

Mrs. Bradley's life became one mad, frantic, heartbreaking pursuit of the man who was tired of her. With every shred of the dignity of womanhood torn into tatters and trailed in the dust, she was on her knees, night and day, begging him to marry her, and he would not.

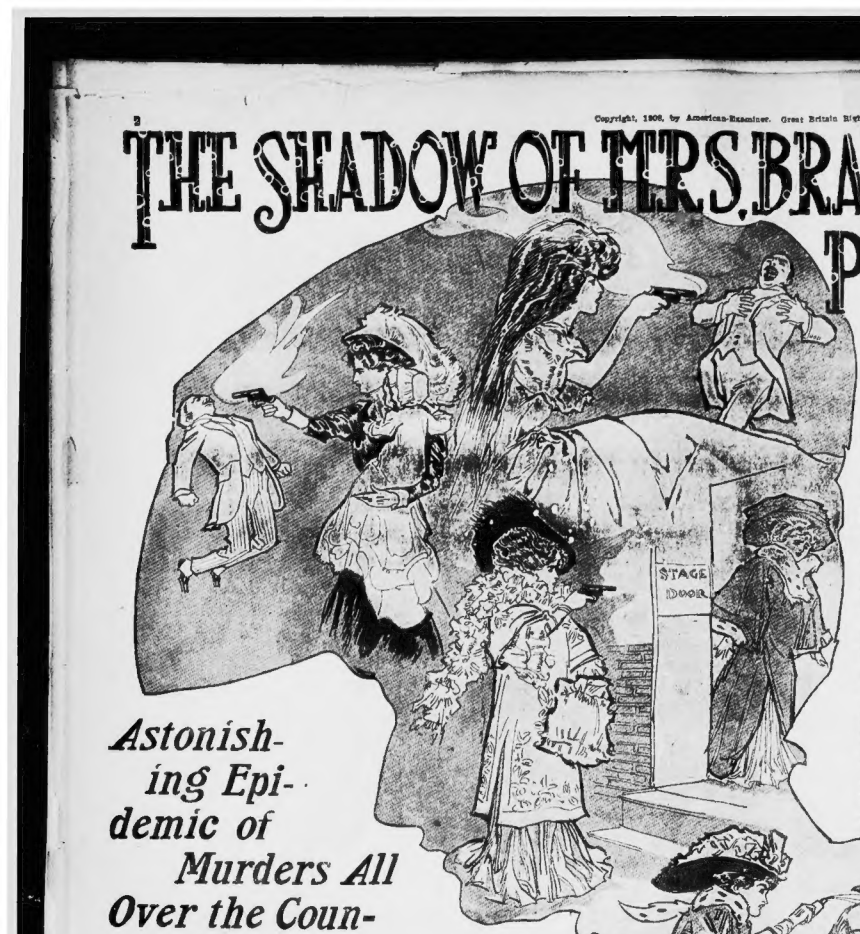
She was what she was because she had made her. Her little children were all to her, and with whom she dreamed unspeakable people would receive in their houses and at their dinner tables.

And it is always the way.

That is Mrs. Bradley's sordid story.

That's the way her beautiful white plumaged swan of romance has come back to her, with its wings clipped and broken and its feathers stained with the dirt of the street.

DOROTHY DIX.



Astonishing Epidemic of Murders All Over the Country Since the Woman Who Killed Senator Brown Was Set Free.

IF Mrs. Annie M. Bradley had run over a man, in recklessly driving an automobile, she would have probably been fined or sent to jail; if she had merely fired a pistol in the streets of Washington it, and Judge Stafford, who presided at the she would certainly have received some trial, was experienced in speech and pointed sort of punishment for breaking a city ordinance.

But she shot and killed ex-United States Senator Arthur Brown and escaped with absolutely no punishment whatever.

And this unparalleled crime of Mrs. Bradley has already shown its effects in a remarkable outbreak of murders by women throughout the country.

Since the jury of twelve men in the court house in Washington on the third of last December, and, in excuse, pronounced Mrs. Annie M. Bradley, his slayer, "Not guilty" of his murder, it seems as if some women were saying to themselves: "Ah, it is safe then for women to kill! Then I shall do what I have long wanted to do, but was afraid to do."

Mrs. Annie M. Bradley, after eight years of association with the man, who was married and she knew it, followed him from Salt Lake City to Washington and in his room at the Raleigh Hotel shot him twice. He died four days later. Her attorneys cleverly secured postponement after postponement of the trial until the indignation at what was believed to be a cold-blooded murder subsided. Nearly a year after the commission of her crime she was tried.

To plead for her Judge Orlando W. Powers, a famous orator, came from Salt Lake City. In his State the unwritten law

The two cases were in many respects

In spite of the protests of the Thompsons, Pete Adams, claiming to be Marie's husband, carried them away with him.

"She is my wife," he declared excitedly, "bought and paid for according to our laws, and you cannot take her from me."

Then Marie's father told how Marie disappeared from her Los Angeles home more than a year ago; how he discovered that she had been stolen by Leon Lehan, a gypsy suitor for Marie's hand, who had been forbidden the house, and his wife, selling all their property to provide the means, had been on Lehan's trail ever since.

To choose which side to believe it was now necessary to glance at the lowering gypsy faces and then at the open, frank countenances of Marie and of her father and mother.

The Judge awarded the girl to her father, and warned the gypsies not to let the laws and customs of their race come into conflict with those of the United States. They left the courtroom and, went back to their camp muttering and fell defiant.

It was a happy reunion for the Thompsons, and they lost no time in starting back for their California home.

Some of the Recent Tragedies to Which Women Have Been Inspired by the Acquittal of Mrs. Annie M. Bradley.

Mrs. Griffith was, like Mrs. Bradley, a woman who no apparent reason her virtues for her folly and viciousness. She became infatuated with Dr. James A. Attridge as Mrs. Bradley had become infatuated with Senator Brown. Guilt followed in both cases. Mr. and Mrs. Griffith separated as Mr. and Mrs. Bradley and his wife had done. Mrs. Griffith importuned the physician to marry her.

And because he insisted upon keeping his name with a young woman to whom he was engaged, Mrs. Griffith shot him.

There were visits by Mrs. Griffith to Attridge's office, as there had been by Mrs. Bradley to Senator Brown's, each woman using the same phrase: "I asked him to do right by me."

And in the end Mrs. Griffith shot Dr. Attridge under circumstances very similar to the killing of Senator Brown.

She had just returned from a hospital under the escort of Dr. Attridge. He had helped her from the carriage and carried her to the room in her apartments where her maid was waiting for her. No one knows what was the conversation of the guilty pair as they drove home from the hospital. Although Mrs. Attridge had contemplated going back to her husband, it is thought that she urged him once more, as Mrs. Bradley said she urged Brown in the room in the Raleigh Hotel, "to keep his promises." Probably the man refused, as he had many times before refused.

Mrs. Wade said that Dr. Attridge brought her sister to the apartment and ordered her to be put to bed at once. This Mrs. Wade did.

"Put the light out," she says Mrs. Griffith had said to her, "and tell the doctor to come here for a moment."

Mrs. Wade obeyed. Opening the door of the darkened room she said: "My sister wants to speak to you, Dr. Attridge," and Attridge rose and went in. She saw Dr. Attridge walk to the door, saw his figure outlined in its frame for a moment, then heard the crash of a bullet and saw the man fall forward on his face.

Mrs. Griffith, hysterically sobbing, told her sister she had slipped to the bureau drawer, drawn out a revolver and fired at Dr. Attridge as soon as her sister had disappeared.

The wounded man was taken to a hospital, and on the way said: "She shot me. Mrs. Griffith shot me."

Mrs. Griffith and Mrs. Bradley both made the point that they were dominated by the men whom they afterward shot. "He controlled me absolutely," said Mrs. Bradley. "My wife said the doctor had her completely under his control," said the wretched husband, James H. Griffith.

But it is related of Mrs. Bradley that she prayed for the recovery of her victim, that she was very anxious that Brown should live, while Mrs. Griffith, asking about Dr. Attridge, said: "I hope he will die. He deserved to die."

This student of the Bradley case had even had a jaunt like those which Mrs. Bradley had described on the stand.

"My trip South with Dr. Attridge brought about the trouble between my husband and myself," said Mrs. Griffith. "I had not been in very good health and Dr. Attridge advised a change of climate. As my heart bothered me at times the doctor told Mr. Griffith that I was in no condition to travel alone and Mr. Griffith said he would pay Dr. Attridge's expenses in accompanying me. The trip cost Mr. Griffith several hundred dollars.

"When I returned I had a stormy session with my husband. I told him I no longer loved him and he asked me if the doctor had won my love. I told him he had. He turned very pale. He said, 'See him and make him do the right thing by you,' and he left the house."

"I was a ruined and disgraced woman. I was desperate," said Mrs. Bradley.

Mrs. Griffith repeated her words and her act.

"Insanity" was the transparent plea for Mrs. Bradley. Already the husband of Mrs. Griffith has laid a foundation for the same plea. "I don't believe she was mentally responsible for her act," he said.

WOULDN'T IT MAKE YOU MAD!

—IF YOU HAD WRITTEN A NASTY, DISGUSTING BOOK THINKING IT WOULD BE A "GREAT SELLER" IN AMERICA—

MRS. ELINOR GLYN AND HER TWO DAUGHTERS.

—And you had come over to America to exhibit yourself and get your Wicked novel talked about and 'boomed'—

—And the respectable women of New York coldly snubbed you when you showed yourself at the Pilgrim Mothers' Reception—

—And the good women of San Francisco also unintentionally helped boom your book by advising all decent people to burn it—

—And the worthy women of Boston helped advertise it by voting it was too horrid to be on anybody's bookshelves—

—And then all your dreams of enormous sales and big profits were suddenly smashed by appeals to the courts to shut the nasty book out of the mails, and forbid anybody to sell it!—

PUT yourself in her place—imagine you are Mrs. Elinor Glyn, author of the notorious novel called "Three Weeks."

No offense! You are only imagining yourself capable of the sort of conduct that has made this Englishwoman's name a byword all over this country.

If you have scruples, or high ideals respecting the literary art, you are willing to sacrifice them in producing a book that everybody must read—a sensation that will bring you much money and send your name ringing through all lands.

But what kind of a story is it that everybody MUST read? You think it over, saying "Why" to your scruples, if you have any. Ah! It is the Forbidden Story, of course. The kind of story that men tell each other in barrooms. To be sure, great literary artists have told that same story; but who reads the great literary artists? Only the few who love literature for literature's sake.

As for you, you will tell the Forbidden Story, not exactly as men tell it in barrooms; no, but cleverly, in your own inimitable, popular style, with just enough delicacy to tone it down a bit without making it unintelligible even to Biddy in the kitchen.

Ah, no inspiration! "The king can do no wrong." You will discuss indignation by having that Forbidden Thing done by a young and beautiful woman who is a queen!

A splendid idea. Being yourself the humble subject of a king, you congratulate yourself and seize your fountain pen.

Well, you have written the Forbidden Story. A publisher—another humble subject of your king—jumps at it. He prints it and lends the book stands with it. The book reviewers, being humble subjects, tend it to the skies. All your fellow humble subjects read it and gloat over the Forbidden Story, which at last has emerged from the barrooms. The ministers of the gospel, the professional moralists, being also humble subjects, are silent.

What a clever writing lady you are. Everybody is saying so—and your purse is filling with pounds, shillings and pence.

Then you have another inspiration, America! The country that has a thousand sects renders where your country has a hundred. The country that has no king, but so dearly loves the kings of other countries. Decidedly, you will go over to America. You will show yourself to the Americans. They are famous for their hospitality to distinguished foreigners. They will fete you and all the newspapers will interview you. Your Forbidden Story will be "boomed" clear out of sight of the "big four" booksellers.

You come to America. It is all quite true about that American hospitality, about those newspaper interviews. The latter spread the fame of your name and the fame of your Forbidden Story throughout the land, even into the remotest rural districts, the former showers you with invitations—and listens respectfully while—in your best and ingenuous way—you tell them all about your dreadful book with its high and noble and royal purpose.

Secretly you smile and snicker and snort. You even touch in your sleeve. Did ever a book and its author have such splendid, continuous and profitable advertising.

It is your grand harvest time. The finger that harvest of dollars lays the heaven knows you wrote such a thing!

"Because I am interested in such matters," you answer, your face aglow with delight.

You go away quietly and unnoticed with the rapt feeling it was Yes, to you, I suppose such matters are nothing out of the ordinary."

Quite naturally, at first, your self love is so outraged that you forget the beautiful advertisement for your book that you have missed by not being permitted to talk about it—or anything else—at the Pilgrim Mothers' meeting. Reports of how you have been snubbed will leak out. The thought enrages you. What a lot of long faces! and of frumpy, those Pilgrim Mothers are! What a lot of ill-bred old cats!

But a newspaper telegram from San Francisco widely relieves you on your account. Another advertisement for the Forbidden Story. Stunning great! The mothers of that city have been so outraged by a revolting description of your book as beyond the pale, and anything so decent people to burn every volume they can lay their hands on.

Great, simply great! You have become a martyr. There's no advertising like martyrdom. Who one neglect to read a book that good women burn? Why, the Good Book itself has been burned many a time.

You read another telegram telling how the worthy women of Boston have voted that your book is too filthy to be allowed on anybody's shelves. Great!

Now your spirits are quite restored. You are again ready to proceed with the business which brought you to this country, namely, to "boom" your unsavory volume. Calmly you consider how to make a first class advertisement out of that Pilgrim Mothers' affair. A sympathetic interviewer calls providentially. You start the thing by doing a bit of acting for his benefit. You are bursting with rage and indignation.

Who are the Pilgrim Mothers? Violators

of the sacred rights of hospitality, you say, in a tone of righteous indignation. "Shady characters, possibly, possibly dangerous looking fellows, I dare say, but certainly not ladies."

Were the interviewer's hearing keen, good enough to detect the sarcasm in your voice, he would be delighted with the success of his call, for he has yet to hear you refer to the Pilgrim Mothers with anything but respect and reverence. All the world will print and republish those scathing words you have spoken. They will help your book immensely. Reports of how you were snubbed will leak out, for the hotel people are interested in your every movement. What a lot of long faces! and of frumpy, those Pilgrim Mothers are! What a lot of ill-bred old cats!

Why, the reporters swarm in the corridors of your hotel for more scraps of information. Some of the Pilgrim Mothers, you are too ill and depressed, are unwilling to be seen. All you can say is that you have been shocked that you have been treated so rudely, that you would not possibly use the harsh terms attributed to you.

Yes, you are clever! interviews with the Pilgrim Mothers—columns and columns and columns. Articles about you and your book by distinguished writers—pages in a woman's dress?"

Head of all, the brilliant and celebrated Clara Morris gives you a half-page article in the course of which, entirely free of charge, she inserts this valuable "ad":

"A lady a husband in good standing and thirty years married to just one wife wrote to read aloud to her, and ended in shocked red silence by the end of about the first week of the 'Three!'"

So it goes for another week. From defeat you win triumph and bigger and bigger sales of your book. Officially you

HOW A BURGLAR REALLY LOOKS

Remarkable Photograph by the French Police of the Busy Robber Goulot, Just as He Was Captured.

HOW THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN BURGLARS WERE SURPRISED OPENING A BANK SAFE WITH AN ELECTRIC DRILL.

Photograph by the Paris Police of the Notorious Burglar Alphonse Goulot, in Mask and Slouch Hat, and Carrying a Dark Lantern, as He Appeared When Robbing Monsieur Bureau's House.

THE masked burglar is a figure of terror in all lands. Especially in the country and in quiet suburban regions he is feared, and it is in those regions that he chiefly operates.

House burglary has become the principal occupation of the more desperate criminal classes. The robbing of banks and business places has become too difficult and dangerous to attract any but a few men of exceptional daring and ingenuity.

The burglar chooses by preference a comfortable house of the middle class, where he knows there are no man servants and probably only one man in the house. The housemaster, even if ordinarily courageous, may be excused for feeling scared when awakened from his slumbers in the middle of a cold, dark, Winter's night by a burglar.

He is afraid to shoot in the dark, if he has a revolver, for fear of hitting some of his family. Probably he strikes a light, and perhaps comes face to face with the burglar, masked and crouching in a corner, pistol in hand.

What does a masked burglar look like? By a curious combination of circumstances, we have a perfect photographic reproduction of one of the most desperate specimens of the tribe, showing him just at the critical moment of one of his crimes.

The burglar is Alphonse Goulot, also known as Vitasse, a desperate and murderous Parisian criminal. It is said that he has committed about one hundred burglaries in the course of his career, and many murderous assaults. Lately he has been operating at Paris, a suburb of Paris, where there are many villas of well-to-do merchants. One night he broke into the house of Monsieur Jean Bureau, a wealthy dealer in silk goods. Monsieur Bureau, who was awakened in bed by a noise, stretched out his hand, turned on an electric button and flooded the room with light.

There stood a masked burglar peering between the curtains that separated the bedroom from the adjoining dressing room, and aiming a revolver at Monsieur Bureau as he lay in bed. The householder was helpless and the thief carried off a rich haul of cash and valuables, but the police were on his track, and in a few days caught him.

In French criminal procedure there have a picturesque ceremony known as "the reconstitution of the crime." The crime is acted over again, just as it is supposed to have taken place.

The curtains were arranged just as they had been in the Bureaus' bedroom. Then Goulot was brought in, his battered soft hat on his head, his mask on his face and his revolver, unloaded, in his hand. Then he was forced to stand between the curtains just as he had done in the Bureau house. His small, wicked eyes peered through the mask, and below it gaped his ugly and misshapen mouth.

"That's the gun! That's he!" cried Monsieur and Madame Bureau at once. The criminal was soon afterward convicted.

Although bank burglary, on a common in this country, has become comparatively rare on account of the strength of modern vaults and safes, there are certain progressive and scientific criminals who have applied the power of electricity to this branch of crime.

Mr. Mason M. Townsend, a special agent of the American Surety company, of New York, gave some interesting details about the scientific electrical cracksmiia the other day.

He carries only a drill which looks like a soldering iron, a small coil of insulated wire and an asbestos shield to protect him from the sparks that are thrown off in the burning," said Mr. Townsend, "but with these simple articles and a current of electricity that is not dangerous to life he can melt a hole in the hardest steel that is forged.

"The reading and soldering of electricity probably set him thinking, but he doubtless took his first cue from an incident which occurred in a town in Maine.

"A certain bank in this place had a two-movement time lock on its vault door. This duplicate time piece was wound and set for the usual hour to unlock the bolting mechanism next morning, but it didn't work this time; something caught and the vault door would not open.

"They had been particular to procure a vault of the best and hardest steel known, in order to keep out unauthorized persons. Now, no one could get in. To attempt to drill through that door was simply out of the question.

An Electrical Miracle.

"The officers danced about in great excitement, trying to devise a scheme by which to force the door, but their care to prevent this being done by burglars now thwarted their own efforts in this direction. They got the local blacksmith all he did was to break a couple of cold chisels in his blind attempt to start the door. Then some one suggested the watchmaker, he came, tapped the door over the offending clock, hoping to set it throbbing again, but his efforts were futile.

"The bank people were in despair. Finally the electric light tender came around; after looking on a few minutes he inquired: 'What's the trouble locked out?' 'Yes,' was the reply. 'I can open it, if you don't mind spoiling the door,' he said. 'Spoil the door!' echoed the president. 'Young man, if you open that door by noon, there's a hundred dollars in the job for you. But how'll you do it?' 'Burn a hole in it, then reach in and start the clock.'

"The lamp tender had learned from painful experience the tremendous fusing power of the electric current. He had seen steel rails and bars welded; had seen the cores of castings melted off in foundries, and had done a little experimenting on his own hook.

"At the command of the bank president he hurried away, soon returning with an instrument that looked like a long soldering iron with a carbon point and an insulated handle. To the carbon end of this was attached a coil of insulated wire.

"'I tell you again,' he cautioned, 'that the door will be good for nothing but junk when I get through with it.'

"'Please, go ahead,' was all the reply he received.

"He grounded the door by running a wire from one of the hinges to a water pipe. Then he connected the looks end of the wire coil with the arc wire, grasped the drill and, thrusting it through a large asbestos shield, stepped toward the vault.

"Carefully selecting a point on the door over where the clock was located on the other side, he applied the carbon point of his drill to the steel door, and then drew it away the smallest fraction of an inch.

"Instantly there was a blinding flash of variegated light and a shower of sparks flew into the faces of the astonished spectators.

"Slowly he described a six-inch circle on the door with the point of his drill, and in a few moments the metal around the circle began to grow red. Hotter and hotter it became until the molten steel trickled toward the floor.

"Round and round went the drill. In twenty minutes from the time the burning started, the disc from the circular hole in the door fell to the floor with a thud. Quickly thrusting his arm through the hole, the amazed watchman broke the glass face of the clock with a mighty blow and with his fingers released the bolting mechanism. The bolts slunk back with a loud snap and the door was ready to open.

"I believe the first time electricity was used in burglary was in a small mill town in northern Ohio. There was only one bank in the place and it was well known that the payroll money for the mill employees came through its institution.

"About forty thousand dollars had been brought up from Cleveland one afternoon for disbursement in the mill hands next day. It was placed in the vault in plain view of any one who might have been in the bank at the time, and its uncertain was felt for its safety.

"There were, however, a couple of painters there taking in the whole proceedings. They were there for a purpose. No one paid any special attention to the two well dressed strangers who politely inquired about a New York draft, but went away without buying.

"About one o'clock next morning Bill Simmons, the town watchman, was standing in a sheltering doorway a couple of blocks away, his eyes fixed down the pike which served as Main street of the town. All at once the whole string of arc lights went out, then relighted for a moment and again went out.

"'That's strange,' thought Bill, and with a country cop's curiosity, he started out to investigate. He followed the line of lights up the street, and pretty soon he saw that the lamps further up the street were all burning.

"'That certainly is strange,' mused Bill. He walked up to the last lamp that was burning and looked at it. Then he scampered down to the first lamp that was out.

"He was now in plain view of the bank. He was on the point of calling up the lighting plant, when he was nearly blinded by a great flash of light through the rear window of the bank.

"'Fire,' said Bill to himself as he rushed to a rear window of the bank. When he got there he saw that two of the window bars were cut and bent aside. This gave him an idea that burglars, and not fire, were at work inside, so he cautiously raised himself up and peeped in. Just then there was another flash which seemed to fairly melt his eyes. It was like looking into a blast furnace. He was so startled that he loosened his grip on the window sill and dropped to the ground. He did not know at first whether a revolver had been dashed in his face, or what. When he collected his senses he ventured another look. This time he stood on a box.

"Inside were two shadowy forms, one throwing the rays of a dark lantern on a great hole in the plaster which covered the rear of the vault, while the other seemed to be turning a circle on the ceiling of the vault with a red hot pencil. Every time the pencil touched the steel there was a great blue flash and a shower of sparks.

The Steel Door Nearly Penetrated.

"'A few more rounds and we'll be through,' said one of the shadows.

"'Guess it's time for me to take a hand,' thought Bill, so, drawing his .38 Colt's he said in a quick, sharp tone:

"'Hold up your hands, quick!' The figures dropped their tools and started to reach for their guns, but Bill was too quick for them. He shot one in his gun arm and had the other covered before he could draw.

"'Throw me those guns, or I'll drill you both.' There was no use sparring further, so over came the guns. Bill picked them up.

"Simmons marched his prisoners to a lockup and then telephoned the cashier at the bank. The two hurried to the bank and entered. They found that the prisoning had been smoked off the rear of the vault and a large disc nearly burned out of the steel vault lining.

"On the floor lay a carbon drill attached to an insulated wire. This led out of the window to the arc light wire on the side street.

"The job might have been successful, but the operators of the carbon drill did not take into consideration the fact that every time their drill touched the steel of the vault the current was grounded, which caused all the lights to go out; and when it was removed for an instant, the lamps relighted.

"It was this flickering that attracted the watchman's attention and caused their undoing."

The accompanying photograph is a reproduction of the scene that the watchman witnessed when he surprised the two burglars.

MRS. LUCK'S CHRISTMAS SURPRISE.

How Santa Claus Brought Two Little Girls and Two Little Boys--Quadruplets--for Papa's Present.

The Luck Quadruplets, Born on Christmas Eve at Roanoke, Va., Photographed Immediately After Their Birth.

The Astonishing Ormsby Quadruplets as They Appeared, Happy and Vigorous, at the Age of One Year.

TO bear the name of Luck and to become the father of four infants on Christmas Eve is certainly a startling experience for a man.

Mrs. Fannie Overstreet Luck, wife of William M. Luck, of Rutherford avenue, Roanoke, Va., presented her husband with quintuplets on the evening of December 24. The birth of quintuplets is an exceedingly rare occurrence, and there is only one well-remembered case in which all four children grew up strong and healthy. That is the birth of the Ormsby quadruplets in Chicago five years ago.

When Mr. Luck, who is in the employ of the Norfolk & Western Railroad, returned to his home on Christmas Eve he was met in the hallway by the family physician, Dr. Charles G. Caundey, who said to him:

"I wish you a merry Christmas, Mr. Luck, and congratulate you. You are the father of a baby boy."

"I am delighted," said Mr. Luck. "We wanted another boy."

Just then the nurse appeared at the top of the stairs and called out:

"There is a little girl as well as a little boy, doctor."

"I am glad of it," remarked Mr. Luck. "I wanted a girl, too."

Then the doctor returned to the bedroom, and presently he came out and said:

"Well, this is really remarkable! Another little boy has arrived, Mr. Luck. You are now the father of two boys and a girl."

"This is a lucky day for me," replied Mr. Luck, resorting to the favorite family pun. "Providence is very bountiful to me."

At this moment the nurse came up and exclaimed:

"Oh, doctor, there is another little girl! There are now four babies!"

Mr. Luck was slightly staggered by the last announcement. It was almost all his great cheerfulness could do to bear up against the news.

"Providence is almost too generous to me," he said. "It will be a severe struggle to provide properly for all four of them, together with the three I already have; but I shall do my best, and I have no doubt I shall pull through."

"I must congratulate you, Mr. Luck," said the doctor, "upon an event which has never occurred before in my professional experience, and I believe has never been recorded before in the medical annals of this state."

"Yes," said Mr. Luck, "I fully appreciate the fact that it is quite an unusual occurrence."

The birth of quadruplets excited tremendous interest in the neighborhood, where such an occurrence had never been known before. Two thousand visitors came to the house in two days. A public subscription was started for the benefit of the quadruplets, for they were regarded as reflecting an honor upon the State.

The children were all born healthy and apparently destined to a normal life, but unfortunately the birth was somewhat premature, and the children suffered from the lack of incubators. At the end of about forty-eight hours one of the boys died, and a girl soon followed him.

The mother, though remarkably slight and delicate, is doing very well. She only weighs ninety pounds. She is already the mother of a boy and a pair of twin girls, all of whom are living. Altogether, she has had seven children in the six years of her married life.

This event, though very remarkable, is surpassed by the birth of the Ormsby quadruplets in Chicago. That is the only recorded case in recent years in which four children born at the same time have survived their early infancy and after five years show every sign of living to a normal old age.

Mrs. Joseph K. Ormsby was living at No. 406 West Forty-third street, Chicago, when the birth of her quadruplets occurred. They were viewed by hundreds of people, including a number of enterprising museum managers, and the mother was congratulated so many times that a vigilance committee had to be appointed to pass on the admission of visitors.

The mother was thirty years old. She had been married seven years, and was already the mother of ten children. She had had three single children, two sets of twins and one set of triplets. These, with the newly arrived quadruplets, made a total of fourteen children born in seven years. Fecundity was evidently hereditary in Mrs. Ormsby's family, for she was one of triplets, and other cases of multiple births had occurred in her family.

Mrs. Ormsby is a slight and small woman, although a trifle more robust than Mrs. Luck. But she was full of courage and industry.

When the quadruplets were born Mrs. Ormsby was living alone and entirely without means. Her husband, who was a plumber, deserted her shortly before the event, after failing in his efforts to perfect a perpetual motion machine. It is suggested that he was terrified at the prospect of further additions to his family after the ten he already possessed. Probably his child was unhinged.

The quadruplets were named Edith Viola, John James, William Randolph Hearst and Theodore Roosevelt Ormsby. It was to be added that the triplets previously born were called George Dewey, Helen Gould and Carter Harrison Ormsby.

Generous neighbors came to the relief of Mrs. Ormsby, or she would have succumbed to starvation. Some of them did the housework, while others brought gifts of milk, meat and vegetables. Then considerable presents of money were made. The Chicago American contributed $50 and started a fund for the benefit of the family. Owing to these efforts the Ormsby family enjoyed more comfort and prosperity after the birth of the quadruplets than it had done for some time before.

After the first novelty had worn away, however, the contributions from neighbors and the charitable public became insufficient, and Mrs. Ormsby was forced to look about for some unusual manner of supporting her unusual family. One of the largest dime museums in Chicago then offered to engage her and her quadruplets at a salary of $400 a week.

The exhibition proved an enormous success. The good-looking, courageous little mother, with her four healthy, happy, crowing quadruplets, were a feature entirely different from anything that had ever before been seen in a dime museum, and attracted a vast number of visitors, many of them of a superior class to the ordinary patrons of the place.

The quadruplets, who had been born so destitute, enjoyed every luxury that a fond could desire, in consequence of their exhibition. In Summer they were placed in a big, white, well-ventilated, washing room in a cool, green garden. There they lay on a mosquito-white bed, covered with snow-white tissue draperies. Great bows of blue satin ribbon encircled the places where the three boys lay, and a pink bow of corresponding size indicated where the girl was.

Two nurses, in freshly laundered gowns and snowy caps and aprons, hovered over the couch. Outside a carriage harnessed to two white horses waited to take the babies out for a ride whenever they needed it. Every day a special doctor, with a reputation for taking care of babies, visited them to examine the state of their health.

Mrs. Ormsby was supplied with fine clothes and meals, and health and happiness took the place of the sad-looking, half-starved look she had worn after the babies were born.

Speaking of her plight at the time of that event, Mrs. Ormsby remarked at the museum:

"When I looked at them and saw there were four of them my heart sank until I thought it was made of lead. I believed we would all starve. I am a good Catholic, and I knew that it is wicked to wish to die until God calls us, but that day I prayed to God to take the children, all of them, and to take me, too. My husband was gone. I was entirely out of money. There wasn't a stick of wood or a lump of coal in the house.

"The children had no clothes. The rent was--oh, I don't know how many weeks in arrears. I thought if I had one baby I might get along, but there I was, fast on my back, with four of them, and not enough food in the house to keep Daisy from crying with hunger.

"Talk about despair! If I had been a wicked woman I would have had the courage that day to put an end to it all for all of us.

"Now I am glad that I held on to life, for we are better off than ever before."

When the reporter further inquired how prosperous his family had become he attempted to return and relate their wealth. It was then some five months since their birth, and in the meantime the mother had obtained a divorce.

One day Ormsby put his dime and slipped into the museum. He was one among the other numerous spectators about the wife and the four babies.

Suddenly he put his hand out to touch the first in the row. Mrs. Ormsby looked up.

"Hello, Joe Ormsby. Where are you doing here?" she asked.

"I've come to see the babies," the father replied.

"Well, you can't come back to us, now that we are prosperous," said the mother decidedly.

"Will you let me kiss the babies once?" asked Ormsby pleadingly.

"Yes, you may kiss them just once each," said the mother, "and then you get right out of here. I don't want you about me."

Finally the exhibition was stopped by a local children's society. Mrs. Ormsby had not saved sufficient money to support her large family without the museum help, and the famous quadruplets were taken to a home for a time.

Recently, through the kindness of Mrs. W. C. Keough, a leading clubwoman of Chicago, and Herman McInerny, they have been restored to their mother and lodged in a comfortable seven-room flat.

Mrs. Keough has now drafted a law to be put before the Illinois Legislature providing that the Ormsby quadruplets shall be maintained and educated at the expense of the State, on the ground that they reflect glory on it and are the only quadruplets that have ever been born and survived their infancy in the whole United States.

Why Patient Women Make the Best Wives.

PATIENCE is the supreme quality of a woman's character. It is the blossome and ripening the fruit of charity in the young. For this there is need of a patience half divine.

When humanity shall have evolved a perfect race of men there will be less need of this virtue in women. Now it is your face that mother has. You don't look for like in boys any more," said a boy to his sister. That new look which the boy learn that she has married an imperfect creature many degrees below the god of her girlish fancy. And for the facing of this unwelcome fact she requires abundant patience. The patient wife forgives her husband's ill-humors. She discounts his failures and exaggerates his successes.

There is scarcely a wifely virtue but by the twentieth-century wife must inevitably be exercised. "You are growing to have the look of your chief of the indispensable qualities. For no wife has ever had too large a stock of patience. The patient wife forgives her husband's ill-humors. She discounts his failures and exaggerates his successes.

DREAMS AND GHOSTS EXPLAINED

The "Back Door" of the Mind Through Which Our Spirits Escape While We Are Asleep.

THE mind has a back door.

The brain has often been called the house of the mind. One should not be surprised to learn that it has a back door, like other houses.

It is through this exit that the soul escapes in the silent hours—in the hours when we are in the strange death-like condition which we call sleep. At such times it roams abroad in search of adventures, and frequently it finds very curious and even astonishing ones.

In sleep we pass out of the body into a wonderful realm, with which in our waking moments we are not, at all acquainted. What and where is this region, and who are the people who inhabit it. Such questions are most interesting, and now for the first time comes forward a writer from that realm to answer them.

The wise man's name is Professor Moritz Baer, who occupies the chair of psychology in the University of Berlin. He says that the mysterious country which we visit in our ghostly wanderings after, and that the people we meet there are in reality ghosts. Some day, after we are dead, we may come to know them better.

Each day of your existence on earth, says Professor Baer, may be regarded as a life in miniature. Night comes, and you die—temporarily. The whole sum of your survival in the world is a series of little lifetimes, interrupted by brief periods of seeming death, which we call sleep.

The likeness of sleep to death has been the subject of a vast deal of philosophical comment. But it is much closer and more striking than is generally imagined. When you fall into slumber, your eyes turn upward, your heart beat slackens, your pulse becomes feebler, and your breathing slows down. Your condition, in a word, counterfeits death most remarkably.

If the death were real, your soul would take its departure for good and all, never to return. But in the temporary state according to the theory of Professor Baer) it merely steps forth for a while, coming back when summoned by the waking consciousness. In the meantime it may traverse enormous distances for the soul, or ghost, seems to be unrestricted by most physical limitations such as friend and impede the movements of the body.

We often meet in our dreams people who, we well know, have long been dead. Yet, somehow, are not in the least surprised. We talk to them and hear them speak, as if it were quite a matter of course. Why should this be so? Professor Baer says it is simply because ghosts are the only sort of kind of persons to encounter in the country or nation they

In the realm of the Hereafter in which these people dwell a realm in which the Professor Baer believes we must some day take up our own residence. It seems to be a country of shadows. But, unfortunately, the glimpses we get of it are too fleeting to enable us properly to judge. Or, rather, it might be said that, for some reason not easy to explain, our waking memories of our experiences in that mysterious region are so feeble and indistinct, save in rare instances, that they serve only to puzzle and confuse our minds.

Talk With the Merry Dead.

The dream folk, who dwell in the soul beyond the threshold of waking consciousness, appear to be cheerful enough. If we can judge of the conditions of life and death from what we see of them when we visit the strange country they inhabit, it would not seem that they are otherwise than happy. For the most part they are cheerful, they are often merry; they talk pleasantly and sometimes most amusingly.

It may be said that most of the people we meet in dreams are living individuals. Yes, undoubtedly, but not the living persons themselves. These like-wise says Professor Baer) are ghosts as well as the dead. When we meet a living friend in dreamland it does not mean by a ghost is the soul of a human being, dead or alive, made visible to the eyes. Such phenomena are rarely, if ever, observed in waking moments. Only in the silent watches, when the spirits are free to escapes through the back door of the mind and wanders abroad, they are so common as to be not even noteworthy.

And, where the ghosts of the living are concerned, what more natural than that your spirit, on quitting when it slips out of the body and visits for a time of the Beyond, should meet the spectres of other sleeping persons, likewise on the same errand? Most of the souls of men we shall call them that we encounter on these occasions are, as might be expected, those of total strangers, but many are friends or our waking lives, and sometimes they are near relatives. Doubtless, profitable exchanges of reminiscences in regard to such meetings might be made afterwards between persons who had met in dreamland. For example, following a dream conversation in which you two engaged—were it not for the excessively dazzling and fragmentary character of such memories, which hasten to escape as even as we are trying to recall them.

One thing fairly certain is that the ghosts of the dead have no power, or commonly have no power, to do it be in dreams. If they possessed such power, would undoubtedly exercise it; yet quitting aside as the phenomena of so-called spiritualism are now largely discredited they give us no opportunity of the kind, though we would so eagerly grasp it.

Deep down in the human mind there exists a belief that the dead, generally speaking, are hostile and dangerous to the living. Hence the dread which will withhold not only a child, but almost any grown person of either sex from entering alone through a graveyard at night. Indeed, it is safe to say that nothing in the world, or out of it, is regarded with such universal fear as a ghost. This, too, notwithstanding the fact that no authenticated instance is on record in which a spectre or apparition of any kind did harm to a living creature. The superstition in question is doubtless an inheritance from our most remote ancestors, who believed that the dead were liable to assume the guise and role of malignant devils; but it seems strange that modern enlightenment should not have done away with so nonsensical a notion.

Oddly enough, however, when in our dreams we encounter the ghosts of the dead, we are unterrified. To do so, indeed, appears quite natural and a matter of course. For, under such conditions the point of view is changed. We ourselves are phantoms likewise (according to Professor Baer), and we meet them, those others, on an equal footing. They are not afraid of us, and why should we be afraid of them?

At the bottom of the ghostfear is a dread of the vague, the unknown, and the intangible. But, since our soul has made a temporary escape through the back door, it finds itself in a world where, might say, all the relations of things are changed. It has suffered, so to say, behind the scenes, under like circumstances on the stage) the becomes mere matter of course. Intangibility is normal in the realm of the Hereafter—especially when oneself is a part of it.

Professor Baer advances his views on this subject

The same fine fabrics and dainty garments are made of them, but their construction suits the slender figure of youngster and rajah silk.

The jacket may be cut with a straight band or rolling collars. Sometimes the jacket has a full, wide sleeve, and sometimes it is cut with a narrow cuff of the material, finishing with a frill of lace. The trousers are made with fine rows of shirring down the front, and are really quite as full as a ballet skirt.

The sleeves, to be exactly correct, must be a modified affair, but sometimes a turn back cuff is worn, and sometimes a long and roomy sleeve.

Chinese cotton crepe is extremely fine for pajamas. Occasionally it is seen with down the front and on the cuffs. But this material is not regarded favorably, as it is not "good form." Crepe de chine, crepe de pongee and fine quality rajah silk are the favorite and most popular materials.

Charmeuse, messaline, taffeta, and other soft silks of this character are very much in vogue for the making of pajamas, to order, and are very handsome and quite practical.

Undoubtedly the most popular and very good pajamas are those of white nainsook and short skirts and sleeves, as they are the most comfortable. But the woman who likes to make her own clothes can find many pretty designs in the fashion magazines, and as these garments are loose and comfortable, and require no fitting, they are not difficult to make.

Charmeuse, messaline, taffeta, and other soft silks of this character are very much in vogue for the making of pajamas, to order, and are very handsome and quite practical.

Undoubtedly the most popular and very good pajamas are those of white nainsook and short skirts and sleeves, as they are the most comfortable. But the woman who likes to make her own clothes can find many pretty designs in the fashion magazines, and as these garments are loose and comfortable, and require no fitting, they are not difficult to make.

But the woman who likes to make her own clothes can find many pretty designs in the fashion magazines, and as these garments are loose and comfortable, and require no fitting, they are not difficult to make.

If the women are to take up the wearing of these dainty garments, they must be very careful to see to the matches of paste or gems. These stones worn in great grandfather's days worn them with deep satisfaction. They make such charming ornaments for the dress. The black ones, with old diamond orders, are a delightful pin, turquoise and, hasn't it?

Then nightcaps! Have you seen the dear little nightcaps which milady ties down over her shining locks when she seeks repose?

They are little things of lace and muslin and coquettish ribbon bows, made, ... favorite ... of ... [illegible] ... the hair.

A little novelty, which also adds to the delicate perfuming of [illegible] belongings, is the sachet ribbon with which to bind together bundles of lingerie. A ribbon about an inch and a half wide and a yard long is double for about seven inches in the centre. This is filled with sachet powder and decorated with little flower garlands done in water colors or exquisite ribbon work, which is just now a thing of real, artistic perfection.

For the woman of luxurious tastes and the wherewithal to gratify them, is a corset hook of gold studded with diamonds and other precious stones. These little trifles cost from $18 up, and are hardly to be considered for their good taste, ...

SUNDAY AMERICAN-EXAMINER PATTERNS

No. 340.

A CHARMING AND COMPLETE COSTUME EASILY MADE AT HOME.

THIS charming model represents the newest and best of the season's styles. The waist will appeal at once to the woman who is in search of something novel and attractive. The front laps in double-breasted style; it is cut in scalloped outline, the closing being effected by three large buttons. A pleasing feature is the introduction of straps of the material arranged on each front. They afford a convenient place for small pockets that could easily be inserted underneath.

The sleeves allow of being full length or in the modish three-quarter style. The skirt is a graceful five-gored model. The top is tucked to deep yoke depth, except in front, which is left plain in panel effect.

The circular flounces add a becoming flare to the lower edge, which may be in medium sweep or round length. The design would be excellent for taffeta, voile or satin cloth.

For 36-inch bust measure 3¼ yards of 36-inch material will be required for the blouse and 5½ yards for the skirt.

The patterns for the blouse have been cut to sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure and skirt to sizes for 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32 inches waist measure, and to obtain these two desirable patterns fill out the accompanying coupons and mail with 10 cents for each in silver or stamps to

A Wife's Message

I Cured My Husband OF DRINKING
I Will Help You CURE YOURS

My husband was a hard drinker for more than 20 years. I had tried in every way to stop him, but nothing ever helped him. I learned of a simple home treatment which completely cured him. He has not taken a drop since and now I want to tell every woman who has a drunken husband that I can be started and cured even without the patient's knowledge. If you are among those who have a drunken husband and will write today I will tell you just what I did and will also send you, without cost a little book telling how this simple home remedy can be used, and positively stop the drinking habit. Remember, I make this offer to return happiness and hope to you. I will gladly send you this valuable information if you will write me today. My address is Mrs. Mary Allen, Box 1, 1 Home Ave., Auburn, New York. As I have nothing to sell I want no money.

THAW LAWYERS BEND EFFORTS TO SHOW HE WAS INSANE

Present Condition of His Mind Matter for Lunacy Board to Determine.

SO STATES LITTLETON

Defence Attorneys Clash Over Advisability of Putting Evelyn on Stand.

OUTLINE CASES TOMORROW

Rumor Circulated That One of the Jurors May Be Dropped by Jerome.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—Evidence bearing on insanity at the present trial of Harry K. Thaw for the murder of Stanford White will be along different lines than in the first trial. One of Thaw's counsel today said that the defence will seek to prove that Thaw was insane only at the time he shot Stanford White and, no matter what the verdict of the jury—will leave his present condition to be determined later by a commission in lunacy.

The sworn sanity of insanity which Thaw's lawyers will advance as a defence is one that experts declare is not according to modern experience the subject incapable of knowing right and wrong at the moment of his act. It is said to be a possible, and, unlike paranoia, is not progressive.

Outline Cases To-morrow.

The opening of the jury on Friday was taken up in hearing from their investigations of witnesses and all of today was occupied in the reading of speeches which counsel for the defence and prosecution will make to the jury.

When court convened this morning Mr. Littleton announced that the District Attorney's office would not oppose the application of Thaw's counsel for a writ of habeas corpus, and that the writ would be issued.

The announcement was made that Thaw's case would be put over for hearing before Justice Fitzgerald for ten days, when the matter of his present sanity will be argued.

It became known today that Thaw's counsel will not call for his defence any witnesses who testified for the people in the first trial, and that the defence will rest its case entirely upon the testimony which it will introduce.

To Recite Eccentricities.

Affidavits to support these contentions will be submitted, and it is said that Mr. Littleton will especially emphasize the erratic doings of Thaw up to the time of the shooting of White.

Mr. Littleton, when asked if the defence would rest upon the present mental condition of Thaw, said that was not his reason for them to show that Thaw was sane now, but that the affidavits would be decided to and showing that he was responsible at the time of the killing.

The prosecution will take more time at this second trial in presenting its case than it did at the first. District Attorney Jerome said today that at the time of Mr. Jerome was forced to take more his testimony when examining witnesses in rebuttal.

Clash Over Evelyn.

If the indicated position of the defence is carried out, it will place Harry Thaw in a peculiar position if a verdict of acquittal is rendered by the jury. Although declared insane and on the witness stand, he will not be freed unless Justice Dowling so orders.

It is thought highly improbable that he will do this, but will follow the usual procedure and order a commission in lunacy, in whose hands the ultimate fate of the young millionaire would rest.

Harry K. Thaw's counsel are in a rush to get the admissibility of again putting Evelyn Thaw on the stand to testify for her husband.

Martin W. Littleton, chief of counsel for the young millionaire, believes the wife's testimony will be far less effective this time than before. This is strengthened by the fear that young Mrs. Thaw may be subjected to more drastic treatment by Mr. Jerome.

Thaw Satisfied.

Mr. O'Reilly holds that without Evelyn's testimony there is little hope, a feeling which Mrs. Peabody shares. The young woman has decided to be guided solely by the lawyers, although she naturally dreads a repetition of the ordeal she suffered a year ago.

Both the prisoner and his wife are delighted with the jury.

"There is no comparison between this jury and the other one," said Thaw today. "The members all seem to be far superior to any jury I have ever seen in a criminal case, and I am perfectly satisfied to rest my case with them."

The very worst we can expect is a disagreement," said one of the lawyers, "and even that will be a surprise."

Little Mrs. Thaw was in great glee. Annie and again she repeated her assurance that the jurymen were very good, hundred per cent, be [illegible] in the last trial.

16 CHILDREN CRUSHED TO DEATH IN PANIC IN ENGLISH PLAYHOUSE

Stampede of Little Ones at Barnsley Theatre Results in Fearful Tragedy.

BARNSLEY, Eng., Jan. 11.—The frightful overcrowding of the gallery of the theatre here this afternoon was responsible for a panic in which sixteen children lost their lives and dozens of others were seriously injured. The throng was attracted by a children's show-house. It is stated tonight a far greater number were admitted to the gallery—as usual in English theatres, the best part of the house—than could be accommodated there.

When the crush became dangerous the ushers began to herd the crowd children toward the stairway leading to the pit. Near the head of the flight one of them fell and the others passing over, fell and plunged over the body.

FORTIFY PACIFIC COAST, DEMAND OF WESTERN STATES.

Delegation From Washington, Oregon and California Visit White House.

ALSO WAITS ON OLIVER

Ask Exclusion Act or Added Means of Defence From Oriental Peril.

Washington, Jan. 11. The activity of Pacific Coast delegations one of which called at the White House and the other at the War Department point new and grave phase upon the Japanese question to-day.

Taken conjointly the one conclusion to be drawn from the representations of the Pacific Coast States here, by common agreement urged upon the executive department either shut off the flood of Orientals by enacting an exclusion law or fortify the Pacific coast.

The delegation that conferred with Assistant Secretary of War Oliver was made up of Adjutant-General Lauck of California, Harding of Washington and Lister of Oregon. They gave notice at the War Department that from the three States would come delegations of the national guard for the annual period of coast artillery encampment.

Forces Inadequate.

They said that the Pacific Coast States would be willing to organize companies for coast defence work if the Federal Government would lend the necessary equipment, but that the National Guard of either one of the present forces for that purpose.

This action to emphasize the opposition of the Pacific coast States to have troops replied favorably to the request of the coast artillery men in the near future.

The spokesmen of the Pacific coast delegation made no effort to conceal the fact that the present visit will be followed by another in a few days, when it is expected that a public meeting will be held, at which already in readiness for the occasion.

Puget Sound Weak

Congressman Kahn, of California, who called with others at the White House this afternoon, said after the conference that the Japanese question was not the only one involved in the Pacific coast defence problem.

"The weakest spot on the Pacific coast," said Mr. Kahn, "is Puget Sound. Until recently practically nothing was done to fortify that point, and it is only now that the work is being pushed with vigor. Puget Sound is possible."

He did not say whether or not he had discussed with Secretary Oliver the question of sending the battleship fleet around the Pacific coast.

Secretary Metcalf, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, who is a member of the Naval Committee, said:

"The recent visit of the fleet to the Pacific coast has created a sentiment in favor of a large navy. The people of the Pacific coast are in favor of a navy large enough to protect the Pacific coast."

Foresees Yellow Peril

"I believe," said Justice Hoar, "that we will see with the next ten years an army of perhaps 5,000,000 men, well drilled and accustomed to the field maneuvers, and when that time comes I will be in position to say whether or not we will keep out of the next war."

"I do not say that we will have war in the near future, but looking into the future, it seems to me that we will have a conflict some day between the yellow and white races. I am a believer in peace. If it comes, I will be glad to say that I have had a hand in bringing it about."

"How long it may be before that time, he would not say."

"There is a question I would like to ask more than whether Congress ships ought be stationed on the Pacific coast or by a surgeon. But I want to call a navy large enough to protect the Pacific coast and all its interests and I insist on these points."

"If I had the opportunity I would vote for an appropriation of $500,000,000 for a period of ten years for a larger navy."

TEXTILE MEN TO ASK SHORTER DAY

New Bedford, Jan. 11. All the textile unions of New Bedford will shortly take a fight in earnest for a shorter working day. A call issued to-day by Secretary Matthew Barr for a general meeting on Tuesday night next, he says:

"At this meeting the question of securing honest help by the use of union labels will be discussed, and a committee will be elected whose duty it will be to confer in connection with the other textile unions to bring about a shorter working day."

This movement in this city is the result of the sentiment expressed at the Providence convention of the United Textile Workers of America and others will be taken up soon in a universal movement.

The secretary of the organization in this city would not intimate what the complexion of the committee would be, and he declined to say if the labels were used in connection with other textile unions through the respective committees, such as the committee which the weavers will appoint.

Edward A. Lindsay, secretary of the Loomfixers' Union, said: "We pay the management for shop or house [illegible] and we [illegible] the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America for its approval and assistance."

[illegible] Lindsay said: "We may also appeal to the American Federation of Labor, but we shall, anyway, put all possibility out in the hands of our Senators and Representatives a request signed by the officers of all the local boards to the effect that they do all they can to have a bill passed by the Legislature providing for shorter hours for textile operatives."

Charge Discrimination.

The complaint made some weeks ago to the effect that overseers in certain mills discriminating against local weavers and hiring outside help [illegible] will again be brought up. We may [illegible] for the purpose of securing tangible evidence of the charges, and with the addition now in possession of the [illegible] not unlikely that some definite [illegible] to stop the alleged discrimination.

"He is a strong man; why did he die?" John Gerry questioned with a shrug of his shoulders when informed by the chief of Kubak's end.

It is not the belief of the chief that [illegible] was slain for his money, even if [illegible] is missing. He believes that there is [illegible] mystic motive back of the whole affair.

Ask any fair-minded doctor and he will tell you that golden seal, cubebs and oil of copaiba (contained in Pe-ru-na) are valuable remedies in the treatment of catarrhal diseases. And every honest doctor will concede that collinsonia canadensis, corydalis formosa and cedron seed (contained in Pe-ru-na) are tonic remedies of high value. With this opinion all the leading medical text books agree.

57,255 Pieces of Imported Enamelware

At 35c on the Dollar

Once a year the importers in New York close out their entire surplus stocks, including all the pieces that have slight imperfections. This year the Siegel stores were the only organization in America in position to make such a gigantic purchase at this time after so much talk about financial troubles. We are proud to say that we can offer the people of Boston and vicinity the most remarkable enamelware values in the history of this country. Most of the pieces are strictly first quality. Some have manufacturer's slight imperfections, but they do not, in any way, mar the cooking qualities.

This is absolutely the greatest variety of enamelware ever placed on sale in Boston at a special price. There is dark blue, pink, turquoise and brown outside and pure white inside, making them good to look at and strictly sanitary.

Summer Homes If you have a Summer home it will pay you to buy your supply of enamelware now and store it away until you are ready to use it.

Hotels, Restaurants and Boarding Houses As well as all families should avail themselves of this sensational money saving opportunity.

Mail Orders We reserve the right to deliver all mail orders on Wednesday, January 15. Send your order in at once.

Caution:— We want to caution you against delay in attending this sale. Although we have secured pieces the values are something entirely new in the stores of Boston and vicinity and we cannot guarantee that special lots will last for any special period

INDIANA INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE ADOPTS DECLARATION OF PURPOSES

W. R. HEARST'S LETTER OF PRINCIPLES IS CHEERED BY INDIANAPOLIS MEETING

PROMINENT MEN TO WORK FOR IDEALS OF THE LEAGUE.

Many Speakers Promise Aid in Purifying Existing Political Conditions.

MR. HEARST'S LETTER READ

Meeting's Resolutions Embody What Is Recommended to a National Convention.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 11—What was to have been a conference here yesterday of the State Committee of the State Independence League of Indiana with invited members of the organization from various parts of the State, developed into a session of overflow proportions and it was found necessary to abandon the room originally engaged for the meeting and adjourn to larger quarters.

The enthusiasm was of the freshest sort, and the unlooked-for throng gave evidence of the strength that the principles of the League and the movement to further it have already taken upon the citizens in various parts of the State. More than 10 officials of the counties of the State were represented by the committeemen, and many came unbidden to learn more of the movement, which is daily gaining in momentum.

Great Enthusiasm.

Hon. C. A. Walsh of Iowa, for two years Iowa member of the National Committee and secretary of the committee during the last campaign was invited to preside. A letter was sent by the Hon. William R. Hearst, who had expected to be present, but who was detained in New York by important business.

The meeting which proved to be so productive of enthusiasm, was called to order by B. M. Sherwood, of Pelph, secretary of the State League, in the absence of C. E. S. Seal, State chairman, who was detained in Chicago on account of business in connection with the Supreme Lodge of Knights of Pythias, being president of the board of control.

The letter was received with applause that left no doubt as to the hearty sympathy of those present with the plans and purposes of the League as so thoroughly set forth by Mr. Hearst.

Idea of the Conference.

Attorney E. G. Ballard of Gary followed with a rousing speech, at the close of which he presented resolutions embodying the points suggested in Mr. Hearst's letter, which were adopted with a cheer.

These resolutions were adopted not as a platform, it was explained, but as being the idea of those in the conference as what the National platform should be and what should be recommended to the first national meeting of the League for consideration.

Added interest was given to the meeting by speakers who declared that the spirit of feeling had found the expression of machine control and sidestepping of the will of the majority in the choice of the new Democratic State Committee of a new chairman.

Men who have always been loyal party workers expressed themselves as sick and tired of the same old handed methods used and welcomed an opportunity to throw their support to a movement in which independence would be the foundation.

Resolutions Adopted.

Resolutions were presented and adopted with cheers of genuine appreciation, setting forth what it was hoped the League should stand for in framing the law and also expressing the wish for the formation of the largest body of citizens possible and inviting a general co-operation in the patriotic founders of the League, William Randolph Hearst.

It was a representative body of Indiana citizens that was called in response to the invitation and call, and men prominent in professional, mercantile and agricultural life not only had sufficient interest to attend, but without exception seemed to welcome the opportunity to pledge their support to the movement for independence.

From the various districts of the State came the most favorable reports of a crystallization of sentiment against the tyranny of bossism and the evils of corporation control and notice was especially attracted to the excellent feeling among the farmers for a regime in which they would in greater measure receive their just dues.

Among those who spoke was N. H. Rider of Portland, who brought glowing reports from the Eighth and Seventh districts, where he said there were excellent chances of the Independence League being able to

Mr. Hearst's Letter to the Independence League Committee at Indianapolis

THE following letter from William Randolph Hearst, addressed to Walsh, Indiana, Mr. Hearst's ideas for the new party movement was read at the conference of the State Committee of the Independence League, of Indiana at Indianapolis.

New York, Jan. 9, 1908.

Mr. Charles A. Walsh, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Walsh—In response to your request, I send you my conception of the plans and principles upon which the Independence League should be organized in the different States and throughout the nation. It seems to me that the new party movement should not be a third party movement for long.

Hon. C. A. Walsh.

I mean by that that if it is properly directed it will soon supplant one of the old parties and become a second party movement, and even become the dominant party of the nation.

In order to deserve and achieve this much success, however, I think that, while we should be radical in our demand for right, we should be conservative in our methods, and absolutely sound in our policies.

I am in favor of the Government issuing money, but it will have to do it through some sort of a banking medium.

I believe that the best plan to secure a more flexible currency adapted to business exigencies or financial crises is to have the Government issue a specified amount of money and have the Secretary of the Treasury loan it to the banks, preferably the national banks, on security approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, and at an interest sufficient to secure the retirement of the issue when the necessity for it has passed.

The right to issue money should be inherent in the Government, but the money which the Government issues must be put in circulation. It can be put in circulation through a big central bank—a Government bank—but this institution would be in danger of becoming a political bank.

Unhappily, our Government now exercises every degree of financial favoritism with the limited opportunities that it has.

A Government bank would be liable to become a mere political asset of the dominant party. It would lend money to friends and public supporters. Speculative financiers would control it, and, finally, to get rid of the bank and its abuses, we would have to go through again the fight that Jackson fought.

The Government could issue money through the national banks now established, and that seems to me the best way. It is a compromise between the central bank scheme and the extremes of private issue by these banks on their own assets advocated by some of the bankers themselves.

I firmly believe that all reforms should be made with a due disturbance of existing conditions as possible. Business conditions are in a certain way like the conditions under which life exists on this planet. If those conditions are too sudden—if, for example, life is destroyed, and if business conditions are too suddenly disturbed, prosperity is destroyed.

The national banking system exists. It is subject to various evils and abuses, but these evils and abuses can be corrected and the existing system made to be of service in the issuing of money by the Government.

I do not believe that it would be wise at this time to further disturb business conditions, and I think the plan to issue a flexible currency through the banks is a good one and as much as we can accomplish in the near future.

When a certain reform has been accomplished we can go on to other reforms, but it seems to me unwise to jeopardize the success of the whole movement by declaring for ultimate reforms, and putting the party in a position where it will be deprived of an opportunity to put any of its reforms [illegible] people are finally educated up all such reforms.

I take this same position [illegible] revision and an [illegible]

There is no use [illegible] slon of railways. We [illegible] that many people have [illegible] demonstrated [illegible] ernment to conduct [illegible] in other forms.

I believe, the [illegible] ownership of the [illegible] tension of the idea of [illegible] utilities.

I believe in a [illegible] diately or the prompt purchase [illegible] the Government and [illegible] nection with the [illegible] public ownership [illegible] nation of the world.

A further [illegible] the principle of [illegible] ties as regards [illegible] ability to conduct [illegible] good would be [illegible] practical achievement.

Some regard [illegible] date. He had [illegible] family, not because [illegible] more by [illegible] gradually [illegible] can be handled [illegible] terprises which [illegible] tiff and are more [illegible]

[illegible] business [illegible] matters from a business [illegible] an extreme, and [illegible] do not think the [illegible] are in favor of [illegible]

I am [illegible] placement of the [illegible] ence to the people [illegible] in New York.

I think true [illegible] valuable disposing [illegible]

I see no reason why a [illegible] be refused to give away [illegible] right to their consent any [illegible] servant should be [illegible] of the window for his own [illegible] the approval of the owner. [illegible] therefore, would be [illegible] proval of the real property [illegible] the conditions of [illegible]

I am in favor of the real [illegible] cal measure, but which, as far as experience has shown, need seldom be exercised. Nevertheless, the possibility [illegible] unfaithful officeholders. As terms of office are being lengthened to [illegible] right to recall [illegible] the people of the [illegible] control of their public servants.

I am strong [illegible] the direct nominations plank, and I believe it [illegible] portant to destroy [illegible] destroy the system [illegible]

When Tweed was eliminated, John Kelly took [illegible]. When Kelly was eliminated, Croker came to the [illegible]. When Croker was driven out, Murphy [illegible] place, and during Murphy's temporary [illegible] McCarren was boss of Tammany Hall.

One boss is as bad as another, and we will never have a distinct improvement in political conditions under direct nominations allow the people to control the [illegible] instead of placing that control in the hands of corrupt bosses financed by selfish interests.

I consider a declaration [illegible] the use of any money whatever at elections, except for certain specified necessary purposes, to be of fundamental importance.

The corruption of [illegible] amount is largely due—I might almost say entirely due—to the corrupt use of money at elections. And the use of all money at elections, beyond certain necessary expenses, must necessarily be corrupt and corrupting.

Matters have reached [illegible] pass that the old parties no longer spend money in campaigns, but reserve it for use on election day. They no longer spend money to educate the voters, to convince the voters, but merely to corrupt the voters.

The old parties do not spend their money in meetings, and in literature, but they invest it in padded registration, in floaters and repeaters. It is not an exaggeration to say that the attempt of the old parties is not so much to win a citizen's vote as to buy his vote or cast his vote illegally for him.

The corrupt use of money at elections has become more than a scandal; it has become more than a menace to a republican form of government; it has already undermined and partly destroyed republican government, and has substituted the will of an unscrupulous minority for the majority rule which is the basis of all popular government.

I believe firmly that the use of money at elections should be limited to the education of the voters through literature and meetings, [illegible]

[illegible] practices [illegible] I believe [illegible] National [illegible] to prevent [illegible] issue of bonds and [illegible]

Every political [illegible] corrupt our own politics the evil of [illegible] dent on. Over capitalization [illegible] directly responsible, not [illegible] of farm [illegible] as became [illegible] which we have just passed, [illegible] for conditions generally complained of—such as high prices, poor service, discrimination, depreciation of properties, agitation of wages, [illegible] investments.

Take the transportation lines of New York City as a concrete example and we see, first, that the people are unduly crowded into an uncomfortable car; that transportation facilities are inadequate; that employes are overworked and underpaid, and finally that investments in these properties are rendered worthless because of the overcapitalization of the enterprises.

It is [illegible] proper, I should [illegible] the improvement of the service, the transportation facilities, as well as the betterment of the conditions of employes and [illegible] upon dividends on a reasonable [illegible] stocks and bonds, is exhausted in an attempt to pay interest on an enormously inflated issue of stocks and bonds.

I maintain positively that the recent panic, which began as you remember, here in New York, was due to the collapse of such inflated enterprises as the Traction Merger, the Morse Steamship Merger, the Heintze Copper Merger and other overcapitalized concerns of that kind.

Banks that had sent millions of dollars on securities which became suddenly worthless, or were suddenly recognized as worthless, were compelled to close their doors. Depositors became panic-stricken, and runs were made on perfectly sound institutions, and the panic spread from here over all the country.

[illegible] was directly due to unsound conditions brought about by reckless overcapitalization. Overcapitalization and a frantic stock gambling ordered on an inflated issue of these stocks inevitably resulted in both [illegible] and returns for the public, in the neglect and deterioration of the property of the enterprises, or in the swindling of the public through unsound investments.

The evils are the evils of the business world, to which all legitimate business men are exposed, as long as the public generally, [illegible] confidence is destroyed when [illegible] confidence is restored.

We should [illegible] deposit savings banks and a parcels post, improved waterways and a united system of good roads, increased and improved railroad facilities and the abolition of the [illegible] form of rebate and discrimination in railroad [illegible]

We should urge legislation to secure good wages for public employes and reasonable hours, proper conditions of health and safety for the nation's workmen.

We should strongly advocate the abolition of child labor and should demand legislation to secure to children an opportunity for education and development.

Labor organization and combination in [illegible] objects are worthy and the results beneficial. I believe in organization in unions of farmers and unions of laboring men. And I believe in organization and combination in business [illegible] for the purpose of securing economy of administration and increase of production and when the public is allowed to participate in the advantages.

I maintain that we should always [illegible] a distinction between legitimate organization and business to make human effort more effective and to increase and not curtail the production of wealth and that criminal combination in restraint of trade and in establishment of monopoly which is not combination for production, but for extortion. There is the same difference between legitimate combination and criminal combination as there is between commerce and piracy, between business and burglary.

I think, therefore, that we should declare ourselves in favor of State and National incorporation laws to regulate legitimate incorporation and combination, and in support of anti-trust laws, to prevent oppression and extortion of trusts and monopolies. And I think that we should urge the enforcement of the prison penalty against the guilty [illegible] responsible individual controlling [illegible] agement of

"Slim Jim" "Sawed Off" PUZZLE

Can you solve it—the great "Slim Jim" —"Sawed Off" Puzzle—the rebus of the plug hats?

Five queer little men with different sized hats wear them. No TWO MEN are the same height—nor are any TWO HATS, either.

Now, the PUZZLE is to change the FIVE HATS on the heads of the FIVE MEN so that the distance to the ground from the TOP of each man's hat will be just THE SAME.

This is the great puzzle of the queer little men, the funny "Slim Jims" and the "Sawed Offs"—the puzzle that has amazed and perplexed both old and young.

If you can't get the hats transferred so as to make the top of EACH the SAME height from the ground, call on some of your friends to help you.

A big bonanza of prizes totalling just $50.00 IN CASH awaits those who send in the correct or nearest correct as well as the cleverest solutions. See for yourself the great list of liberal prizes. Then know which a committee of unbiased judges will fairly award at the close of the contest, December 25, 1907, in the case of "ties" distributing all prizes equally.

CASH PRIZES—First prize, $25.00 IN CASH; second prize, $10.00 IN CASH; third prize, $5.00 IN CASH; the next five prizes, $1.00 EACH; the next ten, 50 CENTS EACH.

A PRIZE TO ALL who send in a creditable solution. This extra prize will be in the form of a collection of brilliantly interesting reading matter of more than 100 pages. The great literary assemblage will represent reading matter which has cost hundreds of dollars and which, for interest-creating value, is of the very highest excellence. Furthermore this big add'tional prize will be given entirely extra to the $50.00 in cash prizes above—as well as be awarded on the ground of creditable solutions alone. Therefore, there is a chance for every one to win something in addition to the privilege of participating in the big $50.00 contest.

Furthermore, you may take part in this great contest without sending any money. Therefore, mail your solution to-day.

So forward your answer at once—now—so that your reply will be received in time to be considered in the award of the prizes. Address:

Thinks Former Giants Will Strengthen Club—Praises the Doves' Twirlers.

Joe Kelley, the new manager of the Boston Nationals, arrived in Boston last night. He came on from Chicago with Mr. Dovey, president of the club, who went to New York in time to meet the new manager and take him down for his contract.

The final papers were also left in New York yesterday, and when the two men, the metropolitan and the Chicago train, arriving here soon after 8 o'clock last night. While in New York President Dovey and Manager Kelley had a conference with Giant baseship, who figured in the sensational deal between New York and Boston clubs last month and will affixed his signature to a Boston contract.

Messrs. Dovey and Kelley were met by a Boston American reporter when they stepped off the train last night.

Says Kelley Is Boss.

"I haven't a bit of news," said Mr. Dovey. "You'll have to see Mr. Kelley, who is now here with me and who will give you all the information about the players in full."

"I am very glad to come to Boston and be with the Boston club," said Mr. Kelley, "but the statement will be made often enough, I suppose, that I am a native of Boston. My home is in Cambridge, and I have always considered Boston my home. I have followed baseball in the Metropolitan League with a good deal of interest, and I will devote my time to the interests of the club.

"I believe we will have a good club in the South End grounds, and I am looking for the next year's season with a confidence I never felt before. I saw New York will return to the National League. A ball player's declaration of independence is another look around, and I am glad after he left Cincinnati and joined the Chicago Cubs.

Counts on Dahlen.

"Dahlen has been in the business a good many years, but he is a finished player and I have no doubt he will make a good Boston man. He was a favorite with the New York and Brooklyn fans, and I agree that he was the best shortstop in the game. He is a good man, and I am sure he will fill in a good deal of the work of the team.

"Bescher has a staff of pitchers in Young, Dorhman, Lefler, Lush, Harper and Moore, and I think they ought to do good work. I have seen them all play."

Mr. Monday I was at the Boston Club's office in the forenoon, and talked with Mr. Dovey about the Spring training trip. It will be held in Boston. Very likely the team will go to Hot Springs, Ark., as it did last year, but no definite decision has been reached.

WALTHOUR DEFEATS BUTLER CLEVERLY IN TWO OUT OF THREE HEATS.

Cambridge Biker Wins First, but the Southerner Takes Final Honors in Good Style.

Robert Walthour, riding at his best, proved that he is the leader in motor paced racing by taking veteran Nat Butler to a standstill in three heats at the Park, before a crowd of fans, who cheered the Dandie Cambridge boy to victory after his triumph. Walthour was ridden in three heats of two miles each, and the first went to Butler, who took care that it looked certain. Walthour and Butler would win the Southerner in the second heat. He was playing with Butler, it is on by Butler in such a way that Nat is convinced he was in Walthour's case at the end of the contest.

Walthour's Last Ride Here.

With an American flag circling his mates, Walthour came on the track ready for warfare the last time he was to appear in this city before the Atlantic, when he goes to France to compete in a series of races abroad.

Walthour was defeated in the first heat by Butler, who led from end to end, but Butler never let him along in the second heat. Walthour was the first to feel the fourth mile and Butler never got over the ground. Walthour was the prime favorite when the second, it was expected by many that Butler would be unfortunate to get underfoot and ride on making the pace of some

There were continual spurts as the two men raced around the track, and Butler would ride on making the pace of some Tough Quaker Boxer Takes Murphy's Place and a Lively Bout Is Assured.

Jack Loughrey, the tough Quaker, who last night met Young Erne in Philadelphia, will be seen with Packy McFarland at the Armory A. A. Tuesday night.

When the match was made Tommy Murphy was the opponent to be met by the Quaker, but when Murphy refused to meet a strong second to Loughrey, Packy McFarland was secured. Although not as good a match was secured.

When it was announced that Packy McFarland would be seen in action with Loughrey, Jack Murphy, Packy's manager, immediately asked for a match with Loughrey, but Packy refused to meet Murphy. Packy said he would be glad to come on and meet Loughrey, but Murphy would not be allowed to come on the same card with him.

Then Loughrey was accepted by Packy's manager. Loughrey has been training hard for the match and is confident that he will defeat Packy. Loughrey is a clever boxer and a hard hitter and will make the fight interesting for the fans.

The preliminaries will be the same as arranged.

WHITE WINS

Quaker City Motor Club Endurance Run

The endurance run of the Quaker City Motor Club of Philadelphia was won by the White Steamer—in fact, was won twice. In the original contest of January 1st and 2d the White was the only car which made a clean score on the road and also was declared by the Technical Committee to be in perfect condition at the finish. For some reason the Contest Committee refused to accept the findings of the Technical Committee as regards two other cars, and ordered a "run-off" between the White and these cars.

The supplementary contest, held January 4th, served only to emphasize the superiority of the White. The second examination of the cars made by the Technical Committee produced data of such convincing nature that the White was declared to be the winner of the contest and of the splendid MacDonald & Campbell trophy.

With our entry of but one car, we decisively defeated 27 gasolene cars representing 23 of the leading makes. Thus has another important victory been added to the long list of triumphs achieved by the White—the distinctively American car.

Like soap to the skin are Cascarets to the bowels. Use them like soap—in small doses and regularly. It is nice to keep clean inside.

It is a great deal more necessary to keep clean on the inside than on the outside.

Cascarets are more important than soap.

The pores of the skin may become clogged with dirt, but they don't absorb the impurities.

The pores of the bowels do.

There are myriads of pores in the bowels, the duty of which is to absorb the nutriment from food.

That's how we get our nourishment.

But if the bowels are sluggish the food is delayed. It decays and forms gases and poisons. Then those pores of the bowels suck poison into the blood.

That's how we get our ills.

We urge the habit of cleanliness.

Don't wait till you need a physic. That leaves too much of the time when you are only half well.

Keep yourself at your best.

The right way is to carry a box of Cascarets with you. It fits the pocket or purse. Take one just as soon as you know that you need it. It is gentle and sure.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure you get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The price is 50c, 25c and

SHIRT WAIST SALE CONTINUED ANOTHER WEEK

The response to our advertisement last Monday and Tuesday was far beyond our expectations. It was by far the greatest sale of Shirt Waists ever held in this city, which goes to prove the fact that the people of Boston have more confidence in MacDONNELL'S than in any other store. Remember, this is a sale of genuine, high-class waists, not a lot of cheap stuff that we have had to manufacture for the occasion. Many of the waists are from our regular stock, but the greater part of the lot we have had to make up in a hurry, and in order to do this we have had to cut the prices to the bone. Don't miss the opportunity.

The Boy Who Read the American Got the Job.

GETTING a good Office Boy is no joke: the "boy" that's in him will bubble over at times, and all you can do is to make the best of it.

Nevertheless, a boy whose folks read a paper like the American, or, better yet, who has youthful wisdom enough to read it himself, shows a superior kind of raw material for you to train.

The start in business life which a boy makes when he answers your ad, or shows his grit by running an ad of his own, is a serious matter for him. It is not a time when he can afford to seek employment through papers having a class of readers who have no jobs worth while within their giving. What, then, must be the discernment of a youngster who realizes the difference between a business future that has its beginning in the American's columns and a career that starts in lurid misinformation.

Every wise employer realizes that the men who are ultimately to be the backbone of his business are those who start in lowly positions, "stick like leeches," and come out at the top at last. The only boy who has that kind of stuff in him is the one who has come from a decent home influence, and the surest way to know that he has been under such an influence is to get him, one way or the other, through the American.

OLD ENGLISH HIGH BOYS AT BANQUET

Fun and Facts Run Riot at Merry Gathering at Young's Hotel.

Good fellowship and reminiscences of schooldays marked the reunion of the class of 1877 of the English High School on its twenty-eighth anniversary, held last evening in Young's Hotel. Thirty-five members of the last class to graduate from the old school on Bedford street, with a number of invited guests, sat down to dinner and then listened to a feast of fun and facts about the class and what they did and did not do to the teachers.

Previous to the dinner the election of officers resulted as follows: John H. Buckley, president; Major C. W. Abbott, Jr., U. S. A., retired, and Albert C. Tilly, vice-presidents; George L. Kleiman, secretary-treasurer; Hon. William J. McNary, orator; M. W. Abearn, poet; John A. Bruns, Henry Hunter Bernard, M. Wolf, Irvin Hilton, John H. Casey and William N. Schmidt, directors.

Bruen Wast Toastmaster.

William N. Schmidt, retiring president of the class, introduced John A. Bruns as toastmaster, and the latter's introduction of each speaker was warmly received. John P. Casey, head master of the English High School, also was introduced in the evening, told of the advance made in the school along all lines.

Henry Harley followed with an original poem which contained all sorts of "knocks" on the members. Former Congressman McNary spoke for Orator Major C. W. Abbott, Jr., who was unable to be present. The other speakers included Assistant United States District Attorney William H. Lewis and Hon. Edward P. Barry of the Governor's Council, both guests of the evening; M. W. Abearn, Frank W. Sprague, 2d, editor of the Newton paper; George Benedict and former Assistant United States District Attorney John H. Casey.

Boom for Casey

Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, who is a member of the class, was unable to be present. All the speakers lauded Mr. Casey, and said that having lost one member of the class as Mayor of Boston, they should now see to it that another class mate two years hence. John H. Casey.

GRAND JURY INDICTS TWO YOUNG WOMEN

Grace Williams and Marie Barker Called Upon to Face Serious Charges.

Two pretty young women were among those indicted by the Grand Jury during the past week. The girls are Miss Grace Williams and Miss Marie Barker. The former carried on some of her alleged illegalities at Ware and the latter at Ayer.

The charge against Miss Williams upon which the Grand Jury took action was that she [illegible] presented entertainment at an [illegible] Ware, which was [illegible] where the young woman is said to have cut quite a wide swath.

It is claimed that she ran up a board and room bill to the amount of $47, and when the clerk attempted to get the money he failed. Soon after she left she is installed in one was for automobiles which the young woman purchased on this city, to the [illegible] hundred dollars for white wagons. It is claimed.

When the young woman went to Ware she was to secretly country an and [illegible] She got both and still owes for the latter, also several bills, which she failed to pay yesterday she failed to answer to the [illegible] will be put on her trial.

Miss Barker is also indicted. It is claimed that she forged a check for $75 on the 1st National Bank of this city, signing the name of C. G. Binkley to it.

Patrolman John Wilson, who was shot and wounded Vergilius Silver on December 8, because he thought he had committed a burglary and was trying to escape, was indicted for manslaughter.

Joseph Berbo, charged with being an accessory, was also indicted. It was charged that he set fire to a stable on Warrington street.

BELT MAKES HUMAN WHEEL OF WORKMAN

Raphael Contreras, a carpenter, employed by C. S. McLean, at No. 84 Harrison street, was caught in a belt revolving belt yesterday afternoon and whirled around at great speed. No onlookers was quick enough to stop the belt, but put quit the workman had sustained fatal injuries. He was taken to the Relief Hospital where he died last night. He was thirty-seven years old and lived at No. 144 Prince street.

PROTEST HIGH RENTS AT BIG MASS MEETING

Jewish Tenants Gather and Denounce Extortion of Landlords; Plans Made to Push Campaign.

Denouncing the extortion of the landlords in the Boston Jewish quarter, scores of men and women came together at the Paul Revere building meeting held under the auspices of the Anti-High Rent League at No. 15 Poplar street last night.

The meeting speedily settle down to a business basis. The announcement of the chairman that its chief purpose was the selection of men and women to go from house to house to help in organizing the tenants was greeted with enthusiastic cheers, and many volunteers went up to the platform to register their names and to enlist them in the campaign.

Many several spoke on the subject of checking the landlords' greed of a long [illegible] and [illegible] a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
